Four Points Technology is pleased to announce that we have been recognized by Amazon Web Services as their Public Sector Best Partner with Partner Collaboration. The award highlights a recent customer project with a Civilian Statistical Agency including the AWS FEDRAMP approved Infrastructure.

Four Points, working with our partner Enquizit, collaborated to provide a custom proof of concept solution. This aggregated data from various web sources and preexisting structured data sets into a new data lake collection for probabilistic analysis and scientific research.

Code as infrastructure, cloud native functions, and agile development were necessary to vision the future of large/complex analytic and published statistics used across numerous federal and academic constituents. Four Points provided the AWS infrastructure and program management oversight, while we enabled our partner echo system to work with customer data scientists to facilitate an agile methodology. This was key for the customer to achieve near term TCO and results, while planning for future data structure agility.

Four Points is an AWS Advanced Consulting Partner with AWS' Government Competency.
